COMMITTEE STATEMENT AND VIEWS

Purpose and Summary

The Federal Government’s unique mission places some Federal civilian employees in dangerous situations. Sadly, nearly 3,000 Federal civilian workers have died on the job since 1992.¹ For those civilian employees who make the ultimate sacrifice in the course of service to their country, the Civilian Service Recognition Act of 2011 authorizes presentation of a United States flag as a way for the Nation to formally express sympathy and gratitude.

Background and Need for Legislation

Many civilian employees are veterans and thus eligible for military funeral honors, which include presentation of a United States flag.² Federal civilian employees who die of injuries in connection with their service with an armed force in a contingency operation are eligible to receive a United States flag.³ While the Federal Government honors the sacrifice of its public servants who lose their lives in connection with our armed forces, it lacks a policy authorizing the presentment of a United States flag to the families of civilian employees serving elsewhere who lose their lives as a result of their employment. As U.S. Office of Personnel Management Director John Berry stated at the 2009 Excellence in Government conference, “Just as we owe our men and women who die in uniform more than we can ever repay, we owe these non-combatant workers a debt of honor as well, and I challenge anyone to say their lives are less dear.”⁴

Accordingly, H.R. 2061 authorizes agency heads to provide for the presentation of a United States flag to the next of kin of Federal civilian employees who lose their lives as a result of injuries in connection with their status as a Federal employee. Presentation of a United States flag is an appropriate way to honor Federal employees’ contributions to the American public. The Committee believes these individuals are no less deserving of our respect than members of our armed forces.

Legislative History

In 1993, Congress gave armed service secretaries authority to pay expenses incident to the death of a Federal civilian employee whose death results from injuries in connection with their service with an armed force in a contingency operation. Expenses include presentation of a United States flag to the next of kin of the employee.⁵

SECTION-BY-SECTION

Section 1. Short title

The short title of the bill is the “Civilian Service Recognition Act of 2011”.

Section 2. Presentation of United States flag on behalf of Federal civilian employees who die of injuries in connection with their employment Federal civilian employees who die of injuries in connection with their employment are eligible for a United States flag. Agency heads may furnish a flag and pay expenses incident to the presentation of the flag upon request of the deceased employee’s next of kin or another individual as determined by the Director of the Office of Personnel Management.

Agency heads shall inform employees of their eligibility for this benefit.

The Director of the Office of Personnel Management may prescribe regulations, in coordination with the Secretaries of Defense and Homeland Security. Such regulations shall require agency heads to consider the conditions and circumstances of the employee’s death and nature of their service.

mentation of the legislation. The amendment modifies the definition of eligibility to include an employee who dies of injuries incurred in connection with their status as a Federal employee, and to cover postal employees. The amendment provides agencies discretion in the presentation of the flag by authorizing agencies to pay for the expenses incident to such presentation. The amendment clarifies those eligible to request a flag, and grants the Director of the Office of Personnel Management authority to promulgate regulations in coordination with the Secretaries of the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security. Regulatory coordination will ensure appropriate benefits for employees also eligible for presentation of a flag under 10 U.S.C. § 1482a. The amendment was agreed to by voice vote.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

On June 22, 2011, the Committee met in open session and ordered reported favorably the bill, H.R. 2061, as amended, by voice vote, a quorum being present.

ROLL CALL VOTES

H.R. 2061—Civilian Service Recognition Act of 2011

H.R. 2061 would authorize federal agencies to present a United States flag to the families of federal civilian employees who are killed while performing official duties or because of their status as a federal employee. The bill would require the Office of Personnel Management, in coordination with the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security, to develop regulations to implement the legislation.

Based on the current cost to the government of obtaining and presenting flags, and the small number of likely recipients in any given year, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 2061 would have no significant impact on the federal budget.

Enacting the bill could affect direct spending by agencies not funded through annual appropriations, such as the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Bonneville Power Administration; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures apply. CBO estimates, however, that any net increase in spending by those agencies would not be significant. Enacting H.R. 2061 would not affect revenues.

H.R. 2061 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Matthew Pickford. This estimate was approved by Theresa Gullo, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL AS REPORTED
